Endo-forehead Augmentation

Design forehead

Endoscopic forehead augmentation

Smooth and voluminous forehead is desired for every single lady. It's not only good facial proportion, but also more impressive and attractive looking.

Most of Asian people are born with flat or undulated foreheads but many of them pay attention only nose and chin. Facial harmonisation could not be perfected without smooth and voluminous forehead.

Forehead augmentation procedures

Now a day, there are several procedures to enhance forehead area. Each has advantage and disadvantage.

Microfat transfer is quite popular one but unpredictable resorbed fat and unevenness are the big problems. Usually it need more than one session.

Dermal filler is easily to do with less recovery time but the non permanent and unsmoothness of the resting filler including the cost are main disadvantage.

Even forehead silicone implant are used for many years and it's quite good in term of smoothness and permanent result, there are still some weak points like as major operation, long recovery and sometime visible boundary.

Customised endoforehead implant

At present, 3D customize forehead silicone implant can be made to fit individual forehead contour. It can locate the projection point as well as the required volume.

Combination with endoscopic surgery that can reduce the incision size and recovery time, forehead augmentation with customised silicone implant is the most effective procedure now. They can solve many problems of other methods.

If customised silicone implant is required, two weeks is necessary prior to surgery.
